And What Have You

By BOB CRAIG

While were gone on vacation we missed the story on the mental health clinic being proposed for Jones County. The county commissioners took up the matter at their July 9 meeting but failed to take any action.

A motion was made at the meeting by Commissioner Tom Boyd of Stamford that the county participate in such a program but he was unable to get a second to his motion.

As we understand the situation, a new proposal has been presented for the clinic by Charles Borders, administrative director of the Abilene Area Center, Mental Health, Mental Retardation to include Jones County in their program.

Apparently, the clinic, whether a part of the Big Spring State Hospital or the Abilene Area Center, would cost the county about $5,600 a year.

Since the Commissioners have refused to take any action on the clinic, the people of Stamford are now trying to get their City Council to underwrite the program. I do not know if this can be done or not, but I do appreciate their efforts to provide this service to the people of this area.

I still find it hard to understand why the county commissioners refuse to provide these needed services to the public that they are supposed to be serving. It seems that one of the arguments against such a clinic was that they had been warned that if they approved the clinic they would be asked to hire a county wolf trapper.

Sometimes one can only wonder if our form of county government is not completely outmoded and outdated. It seems to be so antiquated that it almost completely fails to meet the needs of the majority of its taxpayers.

Almost anytime that someone goes before the Commissioners Court seeking some new type of service to the people of the county, they are told that the county cannot afford it. But if you are like I am, you will find it very hard to figure out just what you are getting for the taxes you pay to operate this antiquated organization.

While we were in Hot Springs I bought a Little Rock newspaper and happened to read a column by Leland DuVall on the farm page that I feel may be worth repeating—at least parts of it.

As background, this was written during the 60-day freeze and before the new regulations were announced.

It is the writer's opinion that the American public may be in a sense cutting off their own nose to spite their face in their clamor over the price of food. A part of his column follows: "Those who understand what has happened and what is about to happen to American consumers should consider the twin sons of Isaac. Specifically, they might recall the occasion when Esau, the elder, returned from a fruitless hunt and was so hungry that he was willing to exchange his birthright for 'bread and pottage of lentiles.' Now Esau was not, as he believed, so near death by starvation that his birthright would be of no value; he was merely hungry, and he would have survived without the vegetable soup."

"By the same rule, American consumers were nowhere near actual starvation as a result of the rise in food prices in recent months. In fact, they remained the best-fed people in the world. Their food stores were well stocked and farmers, spurred by the promise that prices for their products were relatively favorable, were planning to expand production to record levels."

"Just for the record, consumers were paying (at peak levels) the smallest percentage of their disposable income for food that had ever been recorded in this or any other major country. The sudden rise

Sorghum midge populations are now present in many grain sorghum fields in the rolling Plains, said Jones County Agent Kirby Clayton. When sorghum is blooming and midge number more than two per head, reduced yields will result and heavier infestations can cause a complete crop failure. To prevent a reduction in yields producers should begin inspecting sorghum plants daily after the heads emerge from the boot. Sorghum must be blooming for midge to deposit eggs into the developing florets.

The orange-red midge is about one-twelfth inch long and resembles a common gnat. The midge lay from 50 to 250 eggs in a 24 to 48 hour period. The eggs hatch into larvae which consume the developing seed causing the head to appear blasted. It takes about 16 days from the midge to develop from an egg to adult. Propst Urges Farmers To Join Spray Program

Stuart Propst, president of the Jones County Bollweevil Association, urged farmers here this week to join the Bollweevil Association and sign up for the Fall Diapause Spray Program.

Propst said that if farmers fail to take advantage of this effort to control the bollweevil, Jones County cotton farmers will be back where they were two years ago when the association first organized, and all the money and time spent on last years program will be wasted. The real value of the program will be realized in the next two years and farmers are urged to stay with the program to its completion.

Jones County Agent Kirby Clayton says, from insect counts available in his office, that the spray program is doing the job and insect infestations counts are down in the spray area compared to those in the non-treated area.

Farmers who want to sign up for the spray program should come by the Bollweevil Office at 1010 North Commercial in Anson before July 31 and sign-up for the program.

If you need additional information contact the Bollweevil Office at 823-3659 or county Extension agent's office at 823-3801 in Anson.

According to J. A. Marshall, Director of Agricultural Education, Texas Education Agency, 303 schools conducted this type of training program during the 1972-73 school year. Over 350 schools will offer the program during the 1973-74 school year.

Further information concerning the program may be obtained by contacting Milburn Wink or Gary Finley, Vocational Agriculture Instructors or B. V. Newberry, High School principal.

FIFTY YEARS AGO
(July 27, 1923)

Don't get it into your head that the Herald is about to "cuss," for it is a fact that already about sixty dogs in Hamlin have been killed, since January by George Britton, City Marshal. George says that he will kill all collar-less dogs, free of charge if he can only get to them. From the way the dogs are prowling and howling and growling every night in Hamlin it would leave the impression that there are about 160 more that need what the "sixty" have received. There is a law in Hamlin providing that one who cares for a dog can pay his dog tax and secure a collar. Not all town dogs sport the collar, those are the kind the Marshal is after.

Mrs. Wither's Sunday School Class of the Baptist Church will serve dinner at the Style Shop rooms this Saturday. The young ladies promise lots of good things to eat and drink for just 50 cents.

TWENTY YEARS AGO
(July 31, 1953)

Hamlin High School's football stadium facilities are undergoing an $18,000 improvement program that will provide several new services as well as enlarged quarters or other activities at the field in Southwest Hamlin. Improvements included in the current program are housed in a 24x144 foot concrete block structure where the rock wall on the north end of Pied Piper Stadium has been. It will be entirely fireproof with a concrete roof. New dressing rooms for both the local and visiting teams will occupy most of the new building.

The Texas grain farmer now for the first time has adequate protection for his crops held in storage, according to Commissioner of Agriculture John C. White. Also, for the first time, the farmer may use his stored grain receipts from state bonded warehouses as negotiable security.

Hamlin's Rotary and Lions Clubs are co-sponsoring a financial drive for the Southwestern Diabetic Foundation that is destined to raise several hundred dollars for the foundation's Camp Sweeney near Gainesville.

Santa Fe Carloadings for week ending July 25, 1953, were 23,684 compared with 23,912 for same week in 1952. Total cars moved were 35,097 compared with 23,912 for the same week in 1952.

TEN YEARS AGO
(July 25, 1963)

Hamlin Rebels downed the Hamlin Scrubs last Saturday night, 8-3. Tuesday night the Rebels defeated Abilene 12-2 at Hamlin. The Scrubs had a practice game with the teenage team Tuesday night in which they came from behind to win in the last inning 9-8. The Rebels play Roby Thursday night at 7 p.m. in the Roscoe three-day Tournament.

An invitational Woman's matched goat tying contest will be held this Saturday at the rodeo Arena at 8 p.m. This is part of the family night held every Saturday.

The fire department answered a call Friday for a grass fire on the MK&T Railroad . . . Ave. F. There was no damage. Another grass fire Sunday in the northwest part of Hamlin near Luther Wright's residence, but there was no damage.

At the last meeting of the Hamlin Independent School Board the tax rate for the current year was set at $1.65. The Board took this action following the appeal of the qualified voters in the district for Senate Bill 116. The local rate was set at $1.65 by the board with $1.353 for local maintenance and $.297 for bond purposes. This is a raise of $.15 above last year's rate.

in prices, from an unreasonable low level, convinced them that, like Esau, they were "at the point to die."

"In their weakened condition, consumers sold out for a mess of political pottage that was called 'Price controls' in various phases. The result will not be exactly what they anticipated. The short-term benefit—if anything has been achieved—will bring an inevitable counteraction that will prove far more expensive than the normal fluctuations of prices."

As the writer goes on to point out in his column that was too long to run in full, the United States has enough natural resources and technical knowledge to feed the world, but only if the farmer can make money doing it, will he produce to capacity. As DuVall points out, "If there is little or no hope for profit, he might chuck the whole thing and get a job in a furniture factory."

"All of which brings us back to Esau, who sold his birthright for a bowl of pottage and to the consumer who—in achieving or hoping for short-term price stability—is willing to sacrifice his inherent right to expect adequate supplies of food at his friendly supermarket in exchange for the promise of a small, short-term price cut."

"Another ritual remains. Having sacrificed the consumer into sacrificing his birthright, the smooth-necked, hairless-handed, self-appointed spokesman for righteousness is pulling on his goat-skin gloves and preparing to take away the long-term blessing of abundance. We are about to confer on the political hierarchy in perpetuity the 'dew of heaven and the fatness of the earth, plenty of corn and wine.'"

"It is to be hoped that the United States, in less than two centuries, has not approached the senility of Isaac so that we can be fooled by untanned goat-skin gloves and the smell of food bargains. At the moment, we seem on the way. Already we find ourselves saying: 'The voice is Jacob's voice but the hands are the hands of Esau.' Our doubts, unlike those of Old Isaac, should be fully explored."

Neinda Philosopher For Letting Children Learn Some Things On Their Own On TV

Editor's note: The Neinda Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Route One comes out in defense of children this week, we believe.

Dear Editor:

According to an article I read in a newspaper the other night while I was resting from working all day watching the Watergate hearings, the television industry has drawn up a code of ethics for commercials shown on children's programs.

One of the rules forbids ads that "exploit children," that claim that "if children have a certain product they are better or stronger than those without it," unless the claim can be documented.

I don't know much about children's programs, except those the networks put out every night for adults, and I guess children shouldn't be exploited when there're so many adults around to be taken in, but I was just thinking. Children may learn faster than we realize and discovering hoakum in childhood may be sound training for adulthood.

For example, there are lots of grownups now who, when they were 8 or 9, scraped up a dime to send off for that advertised marvelous gadget you could put under your tongue and throw your voice. I can still see the ad with the youngster standing there with a smirk on his face while his voice comes out of the ceiling to the amazement of young and old alike.

Nobody ever learned to use the gadget, all anybody could get with it was a distorted sound that fooled nobody, but a lot of youngsters, after they couldn't sell it to a friend at a discount, did learn the first step in not being taken in.

Of course, kids shouldn't be exploited, but a kid that has to eat a special kind of breakfast cereal for four years before he catches on he's not any stronger than the kid down the street who eats oat meal, may have a hard time when he grows up catching on to the fact 50 percent of what a candidate says maybe ought to be taken with a grain of salt, any kind of salt, not just the special brand he's seen advertised on television.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Guidelines Offered On 'To Keep Meat On Table'

COLLEGE STATION — Beef-hungry consumers can follow seven guidelines to keep meat on the table in spite of the "shrinking buck," a livestock marketing specialist said this week.

Dr. Edward Uvacek Jr. with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, cited careful spending of meat dollars as the key.

Compare meat cuts on a cost-per-serving basis, rather than price per pound.

"For example, you can get about four servings from a pound of ground beef, but only two and a half servings from a sirloin steak. For them to be equal on a cost-per-serving basis—when sirloin brings $1.49 per pound, ground beef could sell for as much as $2.38 per pound," the specialist explained.

"A brisket at $1.19 a pound will cost as much per serving as a boneless chuck at 99 cents a pound, or shortribs at 79 cents a pound.

"Boneless chuck roast at $1.09 a pound and shortribs at 88 cents a pound have exactly the same cost per serving, but a T-bone steak at $1.59 a pound costs twice as much per serving as liver at the same price."

Uvacek also advised homemakers—when substituting other meats such as broiler chickens for beef—to remember that most of them have very low servings per pound.

"For example, a ready-to-cook broiler at 59 cents a pound is slightly more expensive per serving than brisket or rolled rump at $1.29 a pound."

Don't pay extra for minor conveniences.

"Pre-formed ground beef patties are pretty—but expensive. The amount of work in making a hamburger patty is pretty negligible."

"Similar types of conveniences—at a cost—are built into such items as tenderized or formed steaks, cubed stewing beef, breaded chicken-fried steaks and precooked cuts. Do the work yourself, and save a bundle," he added.

—Carefully compare prices for beef cuts in different stores. "All retailers don't charge the same price for individual cuts. In fact, it's not unusual to have very substantial variations in retail prices between stores—even in a small town."

"Shop around. Don't always buy your beef in the same store, simply because that's where the watermelons are cheaper."

—Get your money's worth in quality. "In some cases, cooking can intensify the problem (like well-done steaks), but, in general, you need a good piece of beef to begin with."

—Learn some of the basic cuts of beef.

"Several different names are used for the same cut because of regional preferences. Just a little study will show you, for example, that a rib-eye steak is the same and probably cheaper than a Delmonico.

"Similarly, a rib steak and a club steak are basically the same. Sirloin steak is a much more tender piece of meat than round steak."

"Also, take a little time to learn the recommended cooking method for each cut—which should be broiled, braised, roasted, pot-roasted. It will pay—in satisfaction."

—Buy on sales—usually the weekend sales will save you money.

"Be cautious on double-stamp days and during mid-week, non-sales days."

"Don't be ashamed of buying just the sales items at several stores that might be close to each other. It's your money—so make the most of it."

Daytime Fishing Facts

It's only natural that fish spend most of their time in sheltered areas—places where small fish can hide and where large fish can forage for food.

But there's another reason—COMFORT—the fish's comfort.

For the same reason that you seek shade, even more so does the fish. You have ways to protect yourself from the sun's rays—the fish doesn't.

You can wear a hat or close your eyes. A fish can do neither. He doesn't have eyelids to close.

So, he does the only thing he can do—seek the shade. He heads for the brush, the lily pads, the shelter of a dock or goes down deep enough in the water to escape the intense rays of the sun.

This should tell you something—which is that fish can be caught on topwater lures early in the morning and late in the evening. Also why they are close to shore and in shallow water during those special hours and on cloudy days.

It also tells you that when the sun is out and blazing, look for the fish in some shady spot or down deep.

So, as some anglers often say—"You gotta think like a fish to catch a fish."

TIPS FOR OUTDOORSMEN

by Vern Sanford

Touching Up the Lures

Any angler who fishes around rocks, boulders, bluffs or gravel beds subjects his artificial lures (especially the top-water plugs and floating "sticks") to real punishment. As a consequence the lures become scarred, the paint cracks and the hooks get broken or dulled.

But, that's where the fish are, so don't avoid these areas. Keep after 'em, even if you have to buy many new lures.

Of course you can replace the hooks on the old lures. Also you can repaint some of the lures, especially the ones with the wood bodies... and wood is now being used again after being replaced with plastic for a long, long time.

While you have the hooks off just dip the lure in a paint bucket and hang the bait up to dry. A bit of old fishing line tied to the eye of the bait, and with a loop on the other end, makes both painting and hanging easy.

After the paint dries, you can give it additional protection and waterproof it at the same time by dipping it in a can of varnish or epoxy.

Kinda fun to do.

If you have decorative ability or artistic talent—and a few different colored cans of spray paint—you can come up with some very colorful combinations.

Who knows—the fish may even like 'em better.

'Tis said that in the Spring a young man's fancy turns to—"fly fishing"—up North.

Really there's good reason for such a statement, too, for in many of the colder areas fly fishing begins in the Spring and lasts through the Fall.

However, in many states, including Texas, there's an increasing craze for bass-bugging with fly rods in the shallow waters along the shorelines.

But all this enjoyment is not limited to the young man—oldsters are fond of fly fishing too, whether it be for trout, bass or those fiesty little bluegills.

Casting with a fly rod and reel is really a sport for all anglers who like to play their catch. This type of fishing is especially attractive to those who hie off by themselves and work the waters under the overhanging willows, or whip a fast mountain stream.

There is nothing particularly new about fly fishing. From time-to-time someone comes up with a new adaptation. Then, about every year there is some kind of improvement—usually in available equipment. But, in the main, the principle is the same.

Fly fishing is practiced mostly on the cold water trout streams of the North, both East and West. Here you find the purist who insists that there is only one way to catch fish—and that is with their favorite tackle, their special equipment and certain type of water.

But fly fishing is fast becoming a Texas sport too—for many anglers—about nine months of the year.

In the warm waters of Texas, many bass fishermen are using fly rods, with shooting taper lines, to haul in fighting blacks.

On the other side of the lake are Texas anglers using ultra-light spinning equipment. Yes, even the big-bass boys (or have you looked lately?).

Then there's the fellow who gets out only a few times a year and whips the streams, sometimes with borrowed, and more often than not with unbalanced equipment.

With trout (both rainbow and brown) being stocked in Texas rivers, trout fishing is growing rapidly in popularity—and the flyrodder is much in evidence. This is especially true in the areas of recent stocking of the Brazos and Guadalupe Rivers, by Texas Parks and Wildlife, below Possum Kingdom and Canyon Lake dams.

Selecting the rod and reel for fly fishing is just as important as picking the proper spinning or casting equipment. Fly rods generally come in lengths from 7½ to 9 feet. Average fly fisherman usually selects an 8½ foot rod, or 7'8" rod with a light tip and plenty of backbone.

There's also a wide assortment of reels. Although the reel on a flyrod serves only as a line holder, some fishermen prefer a good automatic, with an aluminum spool that combines light weight with adequate line capacity, silent wind, free stripping and fast takedown. Line with a front taper helps put bass bugs out a little farther, while the level line is best for trout streams.

Although there are many standard flies, the purists strike out for perfection. Many tie their own flies, with multicolored tackle. That's fine for the man who insists on the finer arts. But you can also fool trout with an ordinary bug bought over the tackle counter of your favorite sporting goods store. Or, for that matter, you can't beat a red worm for filling the creel.

More important, perhaps, than the lure, is the efficiency in using fly equipment—mastering the technique of casting with a fly rod.

It's not difficult to do with a little practice. Every rod and reel you buy includes simple instructions. If you will follow these and study other published material, or observe other casters, you'll be surprised at how quickly you too can master fly casting.

Take time off for a few practice sessions with a fly rod and reel at some casting club, or on a vacant lot—or better still, over water.

You'll never learn EVERYTHING about fly casting, any more than you can learn everything about any other kind of fishing. But you can improve your methods with serious practice.

BRISCOE WEALTH ESTIMATED — Major Texas daily newspapers came up with estimates that Gov. Dolph Briscoe owns more than 300,000 acres of land in South Texas and has assets of over $40 million.

The Governor paid $113,309 in taxes on his land in 1972.

"What we assess him, he pays," said Dimmit County Tax Assessor-Collector Mrs. Jeanne John.

Through leases, in addition to his holdings, Briscoe is said to control a million acres of land.

OIL PRODUCTION WIDE OPEN — For the 17th straight month, the Railroad Commission has directed 100 percent oil production during August.

Commission Chairman Jim C. Langdon said state crude reserves dropped 13.1 million barrels since July, 1972.
